Scoring

For each of your answers, find the assigned point value below, and add all the values. The highest possible score is 130, the lowest is 26.

1. a=1, b=2, c=3	10. a=1, b=3, c=5	19. a=1, b=5
2. a=1, b=2, c=4, d=5	11. a=1, b=5	20. a=5, b=5, c=1, d=1
3. a=1, b=3, c=5	12. a=1, b=5	21. a=5, b=1
4. a=1, b=5	13. a=5, b=1	22. a=1, b=3, c=5
5. a=5, b=4, c=2, d=1	14. a=1, b=3, c=5	23. a=1, b=5
6. a=5, b=1	15. a=1, b=3, c=5	24. a=5, b=5, c=1, d=1
7. a=1, b=3, c=5	16. a=5, b=1, c=2	25. a=1, b=3, c=5
8. a=1, b=3, c=5	17. a=5, b=3, c=1	26. a=1, b=1, c=5
9. a=1, b=2, c=4, d=5	18. a=1, b=3, c=5

If you scored 96 to 130 points:

You are extremely thrifty with your time. You manage it well and don't get sidetracked easily into doing things you didn't plan to do. You are probably extremely good at setting priorities and you don't let minor things take up major portions of your time. You are not necessarily one of those people who seem to have something scheduled for every minute of every day. Such people, though they seem efficient, often are the biggest time wasters. They look busy because they manage time poorly and consequently are always on the verge of being swamped by the things they have to do. Actually, people who score high on this psychograph often look like time-wasters. This is because they organize their priorities so well that they have plenty of time left over to do as they like. The executive who spends large chunks of time on the golf course or the tennis court is often the most effective type of manager. He knows how to delegate work so he doesn't get bogged down in minor details that his subordinates should handle. Those in this high-scoring category may sometimes appear to be chronic daydreamers. But their daydreams are not wasted. Someone like Albert Einstein may have looked like he spent large amounts of time puttering around and daydreaming, but it would be hard to argue that he didn't use his time productively.

61 to 95 points:

You are about average when it comes to wasting time. When something is really important, you'll usually get it done on time and in good order, but in other areas of your life you tend to be lackadaisical about organizing your time. Things you would like to do get put off because you never seem to have time; non-critical work assignments keep slipping further and further down in the growing pile of paperwork on your desk; the dreams of accomplishment you once had seem to recede further and further from your reach. If you don't get organized, you'll find your life has sped by without your ever doing the things you most wanted. Look at any answers you chose that carried point values of 1 or 2. These are your weak areas; start working on them.

26 to 60 points:

You are a spendthrift when it comes to time. You very rarely get full value for the time that slips through your fingers at an alarming rate. However, since time-wasting is basically due to bad habits, you can do something about it.

Time Management Exercises to try at home

Time Management Exercise #1 – Being conscious of how you spend your time

- Review how you spend your time
- Prioritize your goals and objectives
- Compare the two

Determine how you spend a "typical" 24-hour day:

Hours left in your day:

Daily Activities: Hours spent

Sleeping:	<input type="text"/>
Personal care/grooming:	<input type="text"/>
Meal preparation/eating/clean-up:	<input type="text"/>
Family commitments:	<input type="text"/>
Socializing/entertainment (with friends):	<input type="text"/>

These time management exercises will give you a productivity workout on your road to becoming a high performance time manager. Time management exercises are to life management what weight training sessions are to an athlete, or scale practices are to a musician. The more adept you become at applying individual time skills, the greater the harmony between your expectations and your real life experience. Practising these time management exercises will help you build your productivity and performance every day.

Time Management Exercise #2 - Become A Better Estimator

Choose three tasks that you will be working on this week. Write down your estimate of how long each task will take to complete.

As you work, on these tasks, track the real time spent on each. At the end of the week, compare your estimates to actual.

If you were within 20% of your estimate, congratulations. If you were beyond or below the 20% mark, look for reasons why you might have over or underestimated the time required. Use your insights to adjust your estimates on next week's projects. Repeat weekly for one month to improve your ability to estimate required task times.

Time Management Exercise #3 - An Exercise In Focus

Take 15 minutes at the beginning of the next week and note down your top priorities for the following seven days. List several items for each of life's most common arenas: work, family, community and personal life.

Post this list in a prominent spot where you will see it every day. Pause for a moment to read the full list each morning.

At the end of the week, review the list and calculate the number of tasks you were able to complete or move forward. See if you can maintain or improve that number each week.
